FALL 2016

MUSEUM

Virtual Museum of Canada

The Museum was successful in 2016 in obtaining a grant to fund production of an on-line virtual exhibit to be hosted on the Canadian Museum of History's website.

Work on "A. Roy Brown - A Reluctant Hero" began in July and is progressing on schedule thanks to the assistance of The Roy Brown Society, volunteer Editor Laurie Graham and translator Louise Marchand. New and fascinating insights into Roy's life are presenting themselves everyday, adding to the storyline! The complete text for the exhibit has been finished and work has now begun gathering and organizing photographs and videos that will help in telling the story. I am looking forward to seeing this project come together and be ready for public launching on July 1, 2017. Check out the site at:

Manager's CORNER

Nothing equals the thrill of tangible history - objects that they have survived, sometimes for hundreds of years, and that remind us of lives lived in earlier times.

Our new exhibit, "Time-Worn", will showcase clothing from our collection. These are not pristine items. A stain, a carefully mended hole, or a well worn quilt made from World War II uniforms will remind you that real people lived in and used the clothing.

"Less attractive, as a result of age or much use?" I don't think so. Visit us and decide for yourself!

FEATURED VOLUNTEER:

SHAELYN
RYAN

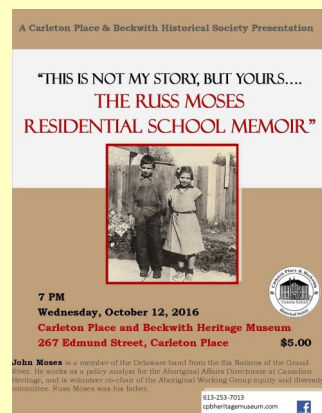

Shaelyn asked about volunteering at the Museum last Spring and was quickly added to the group of ladies in costume at our annual Picnic! She's since learned to input information and images onto our artifact database and is working her way through our WWII scrapbooks. Shaelyn, a CPHS student, is a published author! Her book "All the Time in the World", an historical fantasy, is available at the Museum gift shop.
